

The history of the Saturn Empire

This document is a complete overview of the history of the Saturn Empire from June 2022 until 12 April 2025, written by Fulgur on 12/04/2025. Saturn Aeterna.

In this document "Saturn Empire" will be referred to as "Saturn."

Foundation

The Saturn Empire was founded by aze in June 2022, together with his cousin JoniZ. Aze intended to grow Saturn to promote and sell his games. He advertised the group in SoundCloud's Discord server and on Disboard.

Wildy was the first member of Saturn, but after realizing that all other members were bots, he left, claiming he had joined by mistake-only to rejoin immediately after.

Over time, Fulgur, Denial, LightKaneki, Emilsen, Xiao, and Yaso also joined. Emilsen created a Discord bot named J-COIN, a meme-like cryptocurrency, which became an inside joke within the server. At one point, a moderator of Saturn nuked the Discord server and made a clone called the Neptune Empire, which quickly died off.

Aze accidentally doxxed himself in the announcements channel. Fulgur saved the message as aze.txt, knowing it would be deleted quickly. LightKaneki deleted the announcement just seconds later. Following this, aze quit Discord and handed ownership to Emilsen. However, he later created a Guilded server to continue speaking with Saturn members. This marked the beginning of the rivalry between Yaso and aze.

During Emilsen's ownership, he launched multiple Minecraft servers, which became active hangouts where Saturn members regularly played together.

Aze eventually returned to the Saturn Discord using alt accounts and continued to have ongoing conflicts with both Yaso and Xiao.

Eventually, around September 2022, aze regained ownership of the Discord server and deleted it. Despite the deletion, the Saturn Empire friend group remained intact with the exception of Xiao and Yaso and continued on through a Discord group chat.

Saturn 6b6t

Saturn 6b6t was founded on May 30th, 2023, by aze, Fulgur, and Wildy after Fulgur screen-shared himself playing 6b6t in the group chat, which convinced aze and Wildy to join him.

They traveled far along the highway and built a small shack with a TP trap for gathering materials. They stayed at this shack for around a day until they discovered how to use the IKEA dupe. After duping a few kits, they flew far out and founded the first Saturn base—an underground structure made of quartz. During this period, Wildy created the Saturn 1x1 mapart, and the original Saturn 6b6t Discord server was founded.

After about a week, they traveled 400k blocks out into the End to establish Saturn 6b6t's main stash, and they publicly leaked the coordinates of the original base. The stash eventually grew to over 20k dubs. Saturn 6b6t grew in Discord member count through kit delivery and adbots, many of whom eventually became full Saturn members. One of these members, Witted, teleported Saturn members to a new far-out location, which became Saturn 6b6t's main base. The base initially featured random pixel art, but later a wall was constructed around the peninsula, and numerous builds were added by both the leaders and members.

In August 2023, Fulgur joined a clan named NRNR, led by Mortex, and developed several coding projects for them, including a chatbridge for most anarchy servers and an Aternos server seeker. This solidified a lasting friendship between NRNR and Saturn.

During this time, bd71legend spammed the Discord server, prompting Saturn to declare war on the clan he led, Shulkergang. This triggered a surge of insiders targeting Saturn. The clan went into "paranoia mode," denying any new applications. This shift led to a slow decline in activity, even after Saturn had peaked at around 420 Discord members and 30 active clan members.

At its peak, Saturn members grieved Zealandia's tunnel project three times for fun, alongside members of the Fallen Empire.

Saturn also insided and grieved a clan named JaponAce, but after talks, the two clans allied. A week later, a member of JaponAce named goxdev joined Saturn. However, after a month of building at the main base, he threatened to leak it to Laggang in order to join them. In response, Saturn self-grieved both the recruit base and the main base. The main stash, however, had never been shared with any members and remained safe.

Following the grief, a clan-wide purge of untrustworthy and inactive members took place, reducing the clan member count to around 10. A new base was built in the End, shaped like the planet Saturn.

Eventually, the clan went inactive. The base was handed over to bd71legend as a decoy for one of his plans. A few months later, in late 2023 or early 2024, the Discord server was also given to bd71legend by Wildy for use in bd71legend's new clan, Tesseract.

Saturn Dark Ages

At the beginning of 2024, bd71legend attempted to get aze, Fulgur, and Wildy to assist with his projects. One of these projects involved insiding The Imperials alongside AlmasWarlord, and another involved helping bd71legend build a base, the Saturn owners never ended up helping him with any of the projects. However, after some time, bd71legend stopped reaching out to Saturn's leadership, and the group's activity fell to an all-time low. The friendship between bd71legend and Saturn's owners lasted.

In January 2024, Denial, a former Saturn member, created a group chat that included several Dutch members, among them Fulgur, Menology and Randy. This group chat would become the central hub for all remaining Saturn members throughout 2024. Shortly after its creation, Wildy was added, and aze, LightKaneki and Emilsen followed.

In July 2024, a revival attempt of Saturn took place. Although short-lived, it did result in two notable projects:

- 6b6tdb: A website that allowed users to view a live 6b6t chatbridge and search historical chat logs.
- The Saturn Website: Hosted at <http://saturn.nont123.nl>, serving as a tool to apply to the clan and learn about the group's projects.

During this revival, bd71legend and Mortex were added as additional leaders, alongside the original trio: aze, Fulgur, and Wildy-though Wildy remained largely inactive since the fall of Saturn 6b6t.

During this time, Fulgur and aze theorized about an authentication exploit later used by Autism Inc in 2025, but dismissed it with the assumption that "the auth is probably good enough"-a lesson in not overestimating, indeed.

Despite the initial momentum, the revival lasted at most a month. The lack of new members led to dwindling activity, and the clan once again became inactive.

The Saturn Dark Ages teach us the lesson to never stop expanding Saturn, without expansion, Saturn dies.

Lambda

Having a lambda pfp became a trend among Saturn members starting as early as late 2023, with Fulgur and A.D.T being the first to adopt it. After the failed revival attempt of Saturn, the lambda pfp trend spread significantly among former Saturn members. This shift eventually led to Lambda becoming an 6b6t clan in early February 2025.

Lambda was led by a group of former Saturn veterans and allies, including Emilsen, aze, Fulgur, LightKaneki, Randy, Wildy, bd71legend, Mortex, and Menology. A creative Minecraft build server was launched, a new stash was created-eventually growing to around 2k dubs-and a new base was founded.

However, internal conflict soon struck. A disagreement between aze and bd71legend led to a fractured leadership, effectively splitting the clan into multiple loosely connected factions. This conflict of leading Saturn caused activity to plummet rapidly. Bd71legend wanted a segregated clan where builders, pvpers and programmers were all kept separate from each other and managed by different people, while aze wanted the opposite.

Eventually, Fulgur took decisive action and destroyed all Lambda and remaining Saturn bases and stashes. In response, aze deleted the Lambda Discord server, marking the end of the short-lived but ambitious Lambda clan. Notable Projects During Lambda:

- Creating a Mineflayer bot using efly to map a 20k x 20k area of 6b6t overworld and end spawn.
- Developing a 6b6tdb app version for android access to the chatbridge and filters.
- Making a 3x3 Lambda mapart.

Lambda teaches us the lesson to properly plan Saturn and never have too many leaders- it will result in disagreements on how to rule the clan. This is why we use the rule of two now, only two Overseers to rule Saturn, one to mentor and one to learn.

Tesseract

Eventually, Saturn members grew tired of reviving our old clan. This boredom of constant revival led us to join a group called Tesseract, led by PollyNeedCrack. Within just two days, Fulgur befriended PollyNeedCrack and was promoted to clan leader.

In an effort to rebuild something meaningful, Fulgur launched a new creative build server for Tesseract and invited Randy, aze, and Wildy to join the group. But despite their efforts, something was missing.

The truth was undeniable: this wasn't Saturn.

Everything we contributed to Tesseract-every project, every build, every idea-lacked the spirit we once had. It wasn't born of the same fire. It wasn't built from the same memories. It wasn't part of everything we had worked for.

Saturn is our home.

Saturn is our clan.

We will always remain loyal to Saturn, Saturn alone.

We will never bow to another clan again, Saturn alone.

We will work to see Saturn prosper, Saturn alone.

We will work to see Saturn expand, Saturn alone

We will work to forge a legacy that lasts not just another three years, as it already has, but ten... or even an eternity.

The tales of Tesseract teach us that we will only achieve greatness on our own, joining another clan or working together with another clan is not a part of our culture, it has only brought us being insided by goxdev, internal conflicts by bd71legend and a lack of identity under Tesseract,

Saturn Aeterna.